PROPERTY PURCHASED FOR NEGRO SANATORIUM

State Takes First Step for Segregation of Colored Tubercular Patients.

ACQUIRES IMPROVED FARM

Formerly Used by Norfolk and Western Railway as Experiment Station—Will Erect Open Pavilions for Use of Sufferers.

Ivor, the Norfolk and Western Railway's demonstration farm in Southampton County, was yesterday selected by the State Board of Health for development as a tuberculosis sanatorium for colored people. The property will be bought for $12,000. It will be made ready for patients at an early date.

The new institution will be known as the Ivor Farm Sanatorium. The farm is on the main line of the Norfolk and Western, and contains 224 acres of improved land. There is a house, which can be converted into an administration building, and a number of practically new barns and stables. It is planned to proceed at once with the erection of the necessary pavilions and sun parlors.

Most of the land is cleared and in a high state of cultivation. Within the past few years, it is stated, the railway company has spent large sums in developing the land, making agricultural experiments and the like. The farm is making the best use of the property. The last General Assembly made a substantial appropriation for the erection of a colored tuberculosis sanatorium, and the money for the purchase of the farm will be taken out of this fund. The establishment of this institution will bring to a successful conclusion the long campaign that has been waged by the State health authorities for more effective treatment of negro tuberculosis sufferers than is possible under existing conditions. At present there is not a single State-owned place for colored tubercular consumptives, save those in connection with the Central State Hospital for the Insane and the State Penitentiary.

Hall, of Engine Company No. 1, was burned about the arms when he broke down a door into the burning residence. He was treated at the Virginia Hospital and later returned to the fire.

WRITERS BORN, NOT MADE, SAYS AUTHOR OF 'COLLEEN'

Mrs. Cushing Has Little Faith in Perspiration Without Native Inspiration.

NOT AFRAID OF THE MOVIES

Spoken Drama Will Always Remain Finest Interpretation of Life, Believes Youthful Writer of Six Successful Plays in Five Years.

Mrs. Catherine Chisholm Cushing, author of six dramatic successes, another play to be produced in Richmond next week, and three more in her trunk, is a suffragist, but wears no spectacles. She has the general appearance of a Vassar valedictorian, positive views about the destiny of the movies, and a typewriter that she carries in her satchel wherever she goes, along with her vanity box.

This is a condensed cubist impression of the youthful author of "Colleen," the comedy of Irish country life which will be presented at the Academy of Music next week by the Price Players, as she presided over an interview with the Evening Star yesterday, chaperoned by her husband. Mrs. Cushing was willing to share with the world her views on every phase of the drama, and literature. "Colleen" That was not to be discussed in advance of the performance. Why spoil the novelty by making public the story of the play, which is to be given in the spoken drama? That would be a sin against the joy of anticipation which neither the public nor the press agent could forgive. Suffice it to say that "Colleen" is a simple, sympathetic little comedy of rural Ireland, with a note of courage, a delicious love story, and not a thing in it to wound the political sensitiveness of any Irishman, be he from loyal Ulster or rebellious Dublin.

SIX SUCCESSFUL

The author of "The Real Thing," "Jerry," "Miss Ananias," "Widow's Prayer," "Kitty Mackay," and of the dramatic version of "Polyanna," reached over and tapped the wooden table, as she admitted that she has written six successful plays in five years. "What is your recipe for success in playwriting?" she was asked.

"Keep alert, study people, and make their every action tell you something," she replied. "I go to the theatre, I take a note-book, then run my husband out of the room, lock the door and write—just write what you have seen and learned. I find it impossible to write long scenes in the room. I have a stenographer who would disturb me—I could never work with one. That's why I carry my typewriter with me wherever I go. It is up in my room now."

"Is that recipe foolproof and guaranteed for six months?" the interviewer asked.

"Not by any means," she replied. "No amount of study and effort will take the place of native ability. My theory is that writers—writers of plays and all other writers—are born, not made. All ability has to be there in the beginning. It is the one thing that cannot be acquired."

NATIVE ABILITY
NECESSARY FOR WRITING
She was reminded that this was a sad piece of philosophy for the thousands of struggling writers who are nothing is unattainable to those who try hard enough—that it does violence even to the Declaration of Independence, which assures the simple in heart that they are born free and equal, but she declined to amend her views.

"Why don't you write a suffrage play?" she was asked.

This was designed to put the suffragist and the play on the defensive, for most of her dramatic stories have dealt with the beauties of domestic life and the simple joys of the young. It turned out to be poorly designed.

"Because everybody is talking about it and writing about it," she came back promptly. "One doesn't usually care to see on the stage a thing with which one is so familiar. There is no novelty, no element of personal conflict, nothing dramatic about suffrage."

"Desirable, but not dramatic," the rank outsider suggested.

Whereupon Mrs. Cushing observed that most movies bored her, and that the spoken drama had nothing to fear from the ever-increasing popularity of the screen.

MOVIES WILL NOT REPLACE

THE SPOKEN DRAMA
"The movies will never take the place of the speaking stage. You may as well expect the violin to displace the human voice. The effectiveness of the drama lies 75 per cent in the personality, voice, and magnetism of the living beings who speak its lines, and only 25 per cent in its pictorial 'staging' and 'costuming'."

"The movies will keep on getting better, and they have their proper place, but for the finest interpretation of life the world will still turn to the drama that is spoken."

Mrs. Cushing will witness the production of "Colleen," in which Miss Patricia Collinge, herself of Irish birth, will take the part of Nora.

"It isn't a case of trying to fit the dog," said the author. "I want Richmond to like 'Colleen.' If Richmond likes it we will take it to Broadway."

WRIT OF ERROR IN CASE OF BROCK VERSUS EWELL

Supreme Court to Construe Will of John T. Batten Leaving His Property to His Daughter.

The State Supreme Court of Appeals yesterday granted a writ of error and supersedeas in the case of Pinkie E. Brock against J. E. Ewell, appealed from the Circuit Court of Princess Anne County. The petitioner, Ewell, seeks relief from a judgment entered in this court in February, 1916, in an action in ejectment brought by Mrs. Brock. Bond was fixed at $200. Ewell purchased from Lena Batten, one of the three surviving daughters of John T. Batten, a certain tract of land known as Cooper Field. Authority for the sale was found in the will of Batten, who died in January, 1911. The will left to Lena Batten the sum of $1,500 in cash, and in the language of the will, "the farm upon which I now reside." The rest of the property was divided equally among the three surviving daughters, of which Lena Batten was one, as residuary estate. The question for the Supreme Court to determine is what the testator meant by the phrase "the farm upon which I now reside." Mrs. Brock, who brought the ejectment proceedings, claims that it does not include the Cooper tract, which was acquired by her father at a comparatively recent date, and which, it is claimed, was never regarded as part of the farm upon which Batten lived. This land, Mrs. Brock claims, belongs to the remainder of the residuary estate in which she has a one-third interest, and cannot be alienated without the consent of the other two co-heirs. The lower court sustained this contention, and the Supreme Court, Ewell's instance, will now take the case under review.

The court granted a writ of error in the case of W. H. Wood and W. H. Nelson, trustees, suing for the benefit of W. H. Wood, against R. S. Weaver. The petitioners on April 15, 1916, obtained a judgment for $120 against Weaver in the Circuit Court of Lunenburg County as damages for the wrongful cutting and removal of timber. The court, on its own motion, reduced the judgment to $276, and in this action the petitioners appeal.

NEWPORT NEWS SHORT LINE ACQUIRES OLDER CHARTER

Corporation Commission Authorizes Sale of Holdings of Two Railroads Existing Only on Paper.

The Norfolk, Washington and New York Railway Company, chartered in 1912 to engage in extensive railroad developments in the Eastern section of the State, was yesterday authorized by the State Corporation Commission to sell part or all of its holdings in the Washington-Newport News Short Line, which obtained a charter on January 12, 1916.

The petition for consent to the sale, signed by Charles M. Ward, of this city, president of the older company, drew the commission's attention to the fact that both companies contemplate the construction of a railroad between approximately the same terminal in this State, and asked to be allowed to make the transfer for the good of the enterprise.

The property of the Norfolk, Washington and New York Railway Company consists of certain uncompleted works, contracts and the franchises relating to them. No part of this company's line in Virginia is in operation. The commission's order authorizes the older company to sell all or part of its property upon such terms as may mutually be agreed upon between the owners and purchasers.

In granting the permission sought, the State Corporation Commission expressed the judgment that "the purpose of such property sale is not, and the effect thereof will not be, to prevent competition between the corporations."

THREE CANDIDATES OUT

H. L. Maynard, of Portsmouth, Enters Congressional Fight in Norfolk District.

Predictions that the congressional fight in the Second District will be at least a three-cornered affair if not four-cornered, or even more complicated, were verified yesterday when Auditor Moore received from H. L. Maynard, of Portsmouth, his check for $150 in payment of the candidacy fee required by the primary law.

Mr. Maynard is a former member of the House of Representatives and was defeated for re-election by Congressman E. E. Holland, the incumbent. Mr. Holland is an avowed candidate for re-election and the primary will see the ancient rivals again lined up against each other. There will be a third candidate for the Second District seat in the House in the person of J. Edgar Cole of Norfolk, who has already paid his candidacy fee.
